Introduction

During the week of 15 June 2020, child protection was the subject of fiery discussions in State Parliament. PeakCare Queensland Inc. (PeakCare) acknowledged the gusto with which The Honourable Deb Frecklington MP, Leader of the Opposition placed child protection to the fore in the attention given to it by Parliament. PeakCare also acknowledged the invitation extended to the Opposition by The Honourable Anastacia Palaszczuk MP, Premier of Queensland to work with the Government in a bi-partisan manner on improvements to the child protection system, along with Ms Frecklington's acceptance of this invitation.

This stated commitment to bi-partisanship in tackling the issues confronting child protection opened the door for the non-government sector and other interest groups to openly and robustly contribute the wisdom of their experiences and opinions to the joint deliberations of the political parties. To enable stakeholders in the Queensland child protection system to fully avail themselves of this opportunity, PeakCare in partnership with the Queensland Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Protection Peak (QATSICPP) designed and conducted a survey that was released on 19 June 2020 and closed on 10 July 2020.

Our purpose in doing so was to collect, collate and provide feedback about strategies for "overhauling the child protection system" announced by the Liberal National Party (LNP) to further inform the development and refinement of the policy platforms of all political parties. As other parties release their policy platforms, PeakCare and QATSICPP will look for similar opportunities to seek feedback about these platforms.

About the survey design

The survey was based on information drawn from the LNP's media release, The Child Protection Force: LNP's plan to overhaul child safety system, dated 17 June 2020. Each of the survey questions was crafted using, as far as possible, wording contained within the LNP's media release. The exception to this was the last survey question which invited the survey respondents to comment on what they thought was missing from the proposals put forward by the LNP for overhauling the system.

In respect of the remaining fourteen (14) questions, survey respondents were invited to indicate whether they agreed, mostly agreed, agreed only in part, disagreed, or were not sure about each of the LNP's proposals. Survey respondents were also invited to add comments to elaborate on or qualify their responses to each question. With several hundred pages of comments received, it is apparent that many survey respondents enthusiastically responded to this invitation!

About the survey respondents

In total, 1,998 people responded to the survey. They identified as belonging to the following sub-groups:

Survey respondent sub-groups	No (%)
Employees of non-government organisations including:	811 (40.82%)
• PeakCare Member organisation employees	289 (14.54%)
• QATSICPP Member organisation employees	63 (3.17%)
• Non-Member NGO employees	459 (23.10%)
Employees of Government agencies	633 (31.86%)
Employees of peak bodies or other industry or representative groups	56 (2.82%)
Academics	38 (1.91%)
Private consultants or employees of private consultancy or training organisations	42 (2.11%)
Parents (or other family members) with a lived experience of the child protection system	65 (3.27%)
Young people (under 25) with a lived experience of the child protection system	15 (0.75%)
Older people (over 25) with a lived experience of the child protection system	42 (2.11%)
Foster Carers	121 (6.09%)
Kinship Carers	35 (1.76%)
Others	129 (6.49%)

Eleven (11) survey respondents skipped the question requesting them to identify the sub-group to which they belonged.

The 129 survey respondents who identified as belonging to the 'others' category described themselves as follows:

Interested community member (e.g. parent, grandparent, concerned citizen, member of the public, "just an ordinary person")	39
Retired, semi-retired or former employee of either a government or non-government agency or both	33

Member of a particular professional or occupational group (eg. a barrister, private school teacher, allied health professional, Union Organiser, early childhood educator, Social Work student)	18
Member of two or more of the listed sub-groups (e.g. person who has had a lived experience of the child protection system as a child who is now a Carer and/ or employee of a government or non-government organisation)	14
Relative or friend of a Carer or employee of a government or non-government organisation	13
Non-specified connection with the child protection system	6
Former Foster Carer	4
Friend of a person who was formerly in care	2

- alternative approaches to the ideas proposed, and
- queries about further details required to form an opinion

It is within this commentary that the richness and depth of the survey findings can be located. It would be a mistake to treat the survey findings as a ‘poll’ that simply measured numbers of people who favoured or did not favour strategies proposed by the LNP.

The respondents to the survey should not be regarded as a representative sample, especially when account is given to some of the respondent sub-groups having been relatively small in number in comparison with others. The findings cannot therefore be generalised to specific sub-groups or stakeholders as a whole.

The strength of the survey and its findings lies in the diversity of views within and across stakeholder groups. This provides a rich source of data to generate debate about how to best protect children and young people, promote their development and well-being, and support their families.

The survey’s true value will come from the consideration that can be given to the commentary provided by the survey respondents that will feature in the more detailed reports that will follow this overview of the findings – consideration that can be given to this commentary not only by the political parties, but also a wide range of government and non-government organisations, interest groups and individuals including those who have had a lived experience of the child protection system.

As such, this report is best regarded as something to whet your appetite for the reports to follow. It is these reports that will best serve as the catalyst for further research, discussion and debate about the best ways forward in continuously improving Queensland’s child protection system.

About the survey findings

The survey produced what can best be described as a ‘mixed bag’ of findings. There were some proposals about which there was a high level of agreement. This contrasted with others where the opposite was the case.

In respect of some matters, the findings were relatively consistent across all or most of the thirteen sub-groups, but in other instances, there were distinct differences in the responses provided by the sub-groups. The wide range of responses suggest that, in respect of many of the LNP’s proposals, opinions are strongly divided.

About this report and the series of reports to follow

This report provides an overview of the survey findings. What will follow is a series of other reports delving, with greater detail, into particular topics addressed within the LNP’s proposals. They will include reports that focus on the proposed organisational arrangements for the delivery of child protection services while others will focus on specific policy-related proposals. The series will culminate in a final report addressing responses to the last question in the survey – “What, if anything, do you think may be missing from the LNP plan to overhaul the child safety system?”

Importantly, each of the reports that follow will include a detailed synopsis of the respondents’ comments entered into the survey, including those that stated:

- reasons for agreement or disagreement with the LNP’s proposals
- reservations and/ or qualifications placed on their agreement with certain proposals
